This course is designed to give students a thorough introduction to American constitutional law and Supreme Court decision making. Our focus this semester is on the scope of congressional, presidential, and judicial powers, federalism and national-state relations, and economic liberties and property rights under the Contract and Takings Clauses. Important cases within these areas are examined within their historical and political context, thus giving students a better understanding of the development of our constitutional democracy.

THIS COURSE IS PART OF THE LAW TRACK AND COUNTS TOWARDS THE PRIMARY TEXTS CERTIFICATE!
