

GWSS 105: Introduction to Gender, Women, and Sexuality Studies Several Sections Online in Fall 2024

GWSS105 is an interdisciplinary analysis of personal experiences and social and political institutions as they shape and are shaped by the intersections of gender, race, class, sex, sexuality, ethnicity, nation, citizenship, and ability on local, national, and global levels. Topics include the roles of biology and social construction in shaping gender and sexuality; sources of structural inequities; and feminist, queer, trans, anti-racist, and anti-colonial activisms.

This course fulfills the "Ethical Reasoning and Responsibility" and "Human Diversity within the U.S." K-State 8 requirements

